- Drum Sander or Random Orbit Sander?

Which sander is correct for me? The Drum Sander is a more aggressive sander than is the Random Orbit Sander. The Random Orbit Sander is considered more to be a finish sander than it is a refinishing sander. However, it can be used for refinishing as long as there is little finish left on the floor and you don't have bad cupping in the boards and no deep scratches or stains that you would like to remove. So, in general, if you are refinishing a existing floor we would suggest using the Drum Sander instead of the Random Orbit Sander unless you fit the criteria above. Many people are scared of the Drum Sander, but the key is to keep the unit moving and never stop with it in one place. It is actually pretty easy to use. If you are installing a new floor, and just want to sand it, the Random Orbit Sander is for you, as long as the boards all lay pretty decent. Please call us if you have any questions or concerns about which sander you should use or the operation of the sanders. We have pasted the following links so you can see the instructions or the operation of each of these sanders.
